3. Complex or Phrase Prepositions

Some prepositions are made up of a group of words that do the work of a single preposition. These are called complex or phrase prepositions. Some examples are in front of, because of, with reference to, in spite of, in addition to, according to, along with, away from, by means of, in place of, etc.

There is a car in front of the house.

Rita succeeded because of her hard work.

In spite of the cold, the children played outside in the garden.

USES OF PREPOSITION

Prepositions of Time

A number of preposition may be used to denote time; on Monday, before night, during the night, till tomorrow, after lunch. In most cases, it is easy to know which preposition to use. The following prepositions, however, need extra attention.

1. At, on, in

(a) At usually denotes a definite point of time but can also be used for indefinite periods:

- at 3 o'clock, at midnight
- at the beginning of the class
- at the end of the meeting
- at dawn, at night
- at Christmas, at Diwali

(b) On is used with days and dates:

- on Monday, on 5th December.
- on the Diwali day, on Christmas eve
- on the evening of the 6th March

(c) In is used with parts of the day, month, year, season:

- in the morning, in the afternoon, in the evening
- in summer, in winter
- in March, in 1984

(d) In is also used with the future tense to show the period in which an action will happen:
